Integrated Management SOLUTIONS

The industry-wide failure rate for technical projects averages 50 percent. Integrated Management SOLUTIONS, Inc. (IMS) achieves top project results by using strong project management skills, well-defined processes and robust project communications skills. We keep the project team on track as planned. Great project management lowers your costs and accelerates your business results.

Studies by KPMG, PM Forum and others indicate technical projects are increasing in complexity, length of time to complete and involve more cross functional personnel. These and other factors contribute to project failure rates of almost 50 percent. A 2004 CIO Canada survey of IT projects found that strong project management skills, well defined processes, and clear and precise project communications, lead to much higher success rates.

To provide strong project management skills, IMS screens for experienced senior project managers, systems and test engineers, and documentation and training personnel. We find those who understand organizations, how products are developed and how services are provided.

IMS employs well defined processes that include the use of PMI's PMBOK and established industry wide systems engineering principles. These capabilities are necessary if a technical project is to be completed on-time, on-budget and according to specification.

IMS screens prospective personnel to find highly collaborative experts who possess the strong leadership, communications and interpersonal skills necessary for clear and precise project communications. IMS personnel have the skills to recognize who needs what information, when they will need it and how to provide it.

IMS consultants have technical and business experience gained from serving a diverse customer base and previous employers in the commercial, government, and industry sectors. Since 1997, IMS has worked with Scientific Games, PURVIS Systems, Sovereign Bank, the U.S. Navy, and FDNY to accomplish their projects as planned. Perhaps we can assist you too!
